PURPOSE AND SUMMARY

H.R. 2740, the “MEJA Expansion and Enforcement Act of 2007,” would make contractors and contract personnel under Federal contracts criminally liable for crimes committed overseas. It would amend the Military Extraterritorial Jurisdiction Act (“MEJA”)¹, which criminalizes offenses committed outside the United States by members of the Armed Forces and certain Defense Department contractors, but does not cover all contractors providing services in an overseas military operation. In addition to closing this gap in current law, H.R. 2740 would designate the Justice Department to be the lead agency responsible for investigating allegations of contractor criminal misconduct.

BACKGROUND AND NEED FOR THE LEGISLATION

An estimated 180,000 contractors are currently working in Iraq, and thousands more are working in Afghanistan and elsewhere.² Unfortunately, the current law does not make all of these contractors accountable for their criminal conduct. For example, contractors hired through the Defense Department are subject to both the Uniform Code of Military Justice and MEJA, while contractors who commit crimes on Federal property may be prosecuted under the USA PATRIOT Act. The vast majority of armed contractors performing security functions overseas, however, are not subject to any of these laws.

MEJA is also limited jurisdictionally. As originally enacted in 2000, the Act authorized Federal courts to have jurisdiction over only civilian employees, contractors, and subcontractors affiliated with the Defense Department who commit crimes overseas. In 2005, the Act was amended to expand the court's jurisdiction to include employees of any other Federal agency "supporting the mission of the Department of Defense overseas."³ In practice, however, many contractors are not contracted through the Defense Department, but through other agencies such as USAID or the Department of Interior, and they do not work directly in support of Defense Department missions.

Although not affiliated with the Defense Department, these contractors usually work under the aegis of the United States government, in pursuit of our Nation's objectives, and on activities that directly impact the success of United States military and civilian missions overseas. Nevertheless, these contractors are not subject to any applicable law imposing criminal liability for criminal actions that they commit. It is essential that the Federal Government have a mechanism for holding such contractors accountable in the event of criminal misconduct.

At the time of this report, Congressional and Administration authorities were investigating an incident in which at least 11 Iraqi civilians were apparently killed by employees of Blackwater, a contracting firm operating under the State Department.⁴ The incident enraged the Iraqi government, which accused the firm of shooting civilians with impunity. Defense Secretary Robert Gates also expressed "real concerns" about lack of oversight of such contractors.⁵

In addition, the lack of prosecutions—successful or otherwise—further underscores the inadequacy of current law. At this time, there are 17 pending cases of detainee abuse, including abuses that occurred at the Abu Ghraib prison in Iraq, with the U.S. Attorney's Office in the Eastern District of Virginia.⁶ In some of these cases, the Army has found "probable cause" that a crime has been committed, and referred the case to the Justice Department for prosecution. In addition, the press reports that there are hundreds of serious incident reports voluntarily filed by contractors.⁷ None of these cases, however, has been prosecuted; and the reason for failure to do so is not known.

In fact, since the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan began, there has been only one successful prosecution of a civilian contractor for wrongdoing, which involved the conviction of a CIA contractor for beating a detainee to death,⁸ while, in comparison, there have been more than four dozen courts-martial commenced against uniformed personnel with respect to law-of-war issues.

H.R. 2740, the “MEJA Expansion and Enforcement Act of 2007,” was introduced by Representative David Price (D-NC) on June 15, 2007. The bill ensures that entities under Federal contract who commit crimes overseas do not escape accountability simply because they are not deemed to be “supporting the mission of the Department of Defense.” H.R. 2740 also requires the Inspector General of the Justice Department to submit a report to Congress regarding the identification and prosecution of alleged contractor abuses overseas. This requirement is intended to address the Justice Department’s apparent failure to aggressively investigate and prosecute crimes committed by contractors over which it currently has jurisdiction. Finally, H.R. 2740 requires the Federal Bureau of Investigation to establish a Theater Investigative Unit to investigate reports of criminal misconduct in regions where contractors are working. This is intended to underscore the importance of providing resources to enforce the law.

H.R. 2740—MEJA Expansion and Enforcement Act of 2007

SUMMARY

The Military Extraterritorial Jurisdiction (MEJA) Expansion and Enforcement Act of 2007 would direct the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) to establish special units to investigate criminal offenses by contract personnel operating in the vicinity of U.S. armed forces overseas. In addition, the bill would broaden the coverage of the laws relating to misconduct by such civilian contract personnel. CBO estimates that implementing H.R. 2740 would cost $23 million over the 2008–2012 period, assuming appropriation of the necessary amounts. Enacting the bill could affect direct spending and revenues, but we estimate that any such effects would not be significant.

H.R. 2740 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act (UMRA) and would not affect the budgets of State, local, or tribal governments.

ESTIMATED COST TO THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

The estimated budgetary impact of H.R. 2740 is shown in the following table. The costs of this legislation fall within budget function 750 (administration of justice).

By Fiscal Year, in Millions of Dollars

	2008	2009	2010	2011	2012
CHANGES IN SPENDING SUBJECT TO APPROPRIATION
Estimated Authorization Level	3	5	5	5	5
Estimated Outlays	3	5	5	5	5

BASIS OF ESTIMATE

CBO estimates that implementing H.R. 2740 would have discretionary costs of $23 million over the 2008–2012 period. For this estimate, CBO assumes that the necessary amounts will be appropriated near the start of each fiscal year and that spending will follow historical patterns for similar activities. In addition, CBO estimates that the bill could have an insignificant effect on direct spending and revenues.

Spending Subject to Appropriation

H.R. 2740 would direct the FBI to establish Theater Investigative Units to investigate criminal offenses by contract personnel operating in the vicinity of U.S. armed forces overseas. Based on the extent of current military operations, CBO anticipates that the FBI would likely establish two or three such units, including one each for Iraq and Afghanistan. Because relatively few offenses are committed by contract personnel, we expect that the FBI would need to hire no more than 30 persons to investigate cases under the bill. Once fully phased in, CBO estimates that the costs of those additional employees would be about $5 million annually, including salaries, benefits, and support costs (including additional security measures required for war zone operations).

For this estimate, CBO assumes that there will continue to be a substantial number of U.S. forces operating in Iraq, Afghanistan, or other locations overseas over the next five years. If the size of the overseas forces declines significantly over that period, the cost of implementing H.R. 2740 could decline as well.

Direct Spending and Revenues

Enacting H.R. 2740 could increase Federal revenues and direct spending as a result of additional criminal penalties assessed for misconduct by contract personnel. Collections of criminal penalties are recorded in the budget as revenues, deposited in the Crime Victims Fund, and later spent. CBO estimates, however, that any additional revenues and direct spending that would result from enacting the bill would not be significant because of the relatively small number of cases likely to be involved.

INTERGOVERNMENTAL AND PRIVATE-SECTOR IMPACT

H.R. 2740 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in UMRA and would not affect the budgets of State, local, or tribal governments.

PERFORMANCE GOALS AND OBJECTIVES

The Committee states that pursuant to clause 3(c)(4) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, H.R. 2740 amends existing law to make contractors and contract personnel under Federal contract criminally liable for crimes committed overseas.

CONSTITUTIONAL AUTHORITY STATEMENT

Pursuant to clause 3(d)(1) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee finds the authority for this legislation in article I, section 8, clauses 10, 14, 16, and 18 of the Constitution.

ADVISORY ON EARMARKS

In accordance with clause 9 of rule XXI of the Rules of the House of Representatives, H.R. 2740 does not contain any congressional earmarks, limited tax benefits, or limited tariff benefits as defined in clause 9(d), 9(e), or 9(f) of Rule XXI.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

The following discussion describes the bill as reported by the Committee.

Sec. 1. Short title. Section 1 sets forth the short title of the bill as the “MEJA Expansion and Enforcement Act of 2007.”

Sec. 2. Legal Status of Contract Personnel. Section 2 provides that all contractor personnel operating in contingency operations are accountable under the Military Extraterritorial Jurisdiction Act. This provision extends the Act’s jurisdiction to contractors working in an area, or close proximity to an area, where the United States is conducting a military operation. As a result, all private security contractors in these areas, not just those contracted through or supporting Defense Department missions, are made accountable under Federal law. This change in the law responds to the current situation in Iraq and Afghanistan, where a large number of contractors are working pursuant to contractual agreements with a variety of Federal agencies, including the State Department and the Department of the Interior.

Section 2 also requires the Inspector General of the Justice Department to submit a report on the Department’s efforts to identify and prosecute alleged contractor abuses in Iraq and Afghanistan. Pursuant to chapter 212 of title 18 of the United States Code, the Justice Department and the Federal courts are responsible for prosecuting and hearing cases, respectively, under MEJA. In addition, section 3.3.3 of Defense Instruction 3040.21, “Contractors Accompanying the Force,” states that “only the Department of Justice may prosecute misconduct under applicable Federal laws.” Accordingly, section 2 directs the Justice Department Inspector General to report to Congress on the number of incidents of alleged misconduct reported to the Department, the number of investigations undertaken by the Department, and the number of criminal cases opened and closed by the Department. The report must also include findings and recommendations about the number of criminal cases prosecuted by the Department under MEJA.

Sec. 3. Federal Bureau of Investigation Investigative Unit for Contingency Operations. Section 3 requires the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) to establish a Theater Investigative Unit to investigate reports of criminal misconduct in theaters in which contractors are working. The provision gives the FBI Director the discretion to devote adequate resources to these activities, so the Director has the flexibility to ensure that “unneeded resources” will not be utilized for this purpose. The section also requires the FBI to investigate reports of fatalities resulting from the use of force by contract personnel. In the event of force by self-defense, the term “investigate” is worded broadly enough to allow an initial examination to confirm self-defense, without requiring a long, laborious, costly investigation.

The Committee notes that the investigation and prosecution of criminal misconduct by contractors is integral to maintaining support among host nation citizens for United States troops and missions as well as to ensuring the integrity of such missions. Accordingly, the Committee urges the Bureau to ensure that it provides sufficient resources and agents for assertive investigations into allegations of such crimes.

Sec. 4. Definitions. Section 4 defines various terms in the bill. In particular, the definition of “contingency operation” has the same meaning as the term is given in section 101(13) of title 10 of the United States Code.

Sec. 5. Effective Date. Section 5 provides that the Act is applicable to circumstances that take place where the Armed Forces is conducting a contingency operation, on or after the date of enactment of the bill.

In compliance with clause 3(e) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, changes in existing law made by the bill, as reported, are shown as follows (existing law proposed to be omitted is enclosed in black brackets, new matter is printed in italics, existing law in which no change is proposed is shown in roman):
